Beekeeping in the United Kingdom is the maintenance of bee colonies by humans within the United Kingdom. It is a significant commercial activity that provides those involved with honey, beeswax, royal jelly, queen bees, propolis, flower pollen and bee pollen. Honeybees also provide pollination services to orchards and a variety of seed crops.. Many beekeepers keep bees as a hobby.

Sales of honey have dropped for the first time in six years, as British bee colonies continued to decline due to colony collapse disorder and bad weather. Figures from the British Beekeepers Association revealed that nearly a third of hives failed to survive the winter of 2007 while a fifth of the UK's colonies were lost in 2008.

Around 2,000 years ago, beekeepers began using the first artificial beehives, called skeps [source: Galway Beekeepers' Association]. Skeps look like overturned pots and were made from either baked clay or woven straw. A small hole near the bottom of the skep allowed the bees to come and go, and the comb was laid down inside.

Beekeeping in England changed rather little until the late nineteenth century when modern movable-frame hives were introduced. This paper deals with beekeeping from the twelfth to nineteenth centuries. In England and the rest of Europe, the honeybee kept in hives is Apis mellifera L. The bees collect nectar and pollen from flowers.

~~The History of Beekeeping in English Gardens~~

Beekeeping in hives was probably introduced into the United Kingdom from continental Europe and spread from east to west. Hive beekeeping was well established before the Roman invasion of Britain in AD 43.
